TUBNER On Thursday, October 25, 1878, at Gill's Station, Tennessee, of yeilow-fever, TOMME, son of T. B. and Myra Turner, aged seven years and place morths.

And the flowers that grow between."

In the silent watches of the twilight, at the saddest season of the year, this Reaper visited the happy family of Thomas Turner, and while the devoted mother bent in a gush over the form of her idol boy, and when the fond father lay stricken with the terrible plague, all unconscious of his impending loss, the gentle spirit of little Tommus Turners, winged its flight to heaven. He came among us like Moore's bird of beautiful plumage, to delight the beholder; and

J. Ward, aged 36 years.

During the last three months many good and worthy citizens have been taken from us; but the death of no one was more regretted by those who knew him, and could only know to love and respect, than that of Sur J. Want. Highly esteemed by all his neighbors and friends, he was a kind and indulgent husband and father, an affectionate brother, and a useful citizen, such as Memphis can ill afford to spare. His bereaved family and relatives have the sympathies of a large circle of friends.

STUART-At the residence of his father, Sep-temper 12th, Charles Young Stuart. Among the many bright, noble spirits called from life to death the name of Young Stuart stands high. True, unselfish and devoted in all the relations of life, he died as he had lived, a true man and noble gentleman. The pride and light of a home, where he was the center, a loving son, tender incher, and devoted friend, he can never be forgotien, for with its name will come the memory of his gentle, gentlal hature, and the void laft by his early death can never be filled. Even in death his tender home-ties were not broken, for his loved sister and brother followed in a few hours, and together they passed to that great 'beyond," and over the dark waters will come no more the voices that made music in so many hearts. Not only in the home-circle will he be missed, but more than one heart will shed tears over the quist thoung which holds so much of fair promise and noble manhood.

Oh, mother heart, that cannot, cannot rest, Oh, mother arms, that ache with emytiness; Oh, eyes, that feasted on his manly face, Now blind and darkened with a sore distress. We never dreamed that he could slip away
From out the grasp of so much love and hopeteage us to darkness, with no light of day,
To toll Without him up the s rugge, slope. If it be sin to want him back again, Grudge heaven itself his dear presence there, We ask forgiveness, for our sin its great, And only lightens with a dark despair.

SLONE—Miss M. E. SLONE, daughter of Mrs. Januah Slone, departed this life Sept. 8, 1878; was open March 8, 1865. It is a sad thing to record the death of one we loved so well, and yet such is life in the hands of our Father, who doeth all things well. Mary was a true friend, plain and unassuming in her manners, and such was her christian character, that to know her was to love her. Her death was a triumphant one, calling always on her Savior for help when her sufferings were greatest. When the angel of summons came with its call; she passed from earth to heaven,

Pointing to the glories o'er us, In that happy spirit-land. From her mild disposition and exemplary deportment the had a place in the affections of all who knew her. Size is now safely moored to the bright spirit-land, where lovely seraphs are her associates. Our grief nor eulogy cannot reach her now, but her counsel we can keep, while her memory will long be green in the hearts of those who loved her. She's gone in her beauty.
In silence to rest,
In silence to rest,
Inke snowdrops we folded
Her hands on her breast,
She lies like a statue
Of some Grecian ard,
With cheeks that are palld,
And a cold, hushed heart.

She has gone to heaven before us, But she turns and wayes her hand,

DIED.

At a special meeting of the above club, held this day, the following preamble and resolutions were nanimously adopted:

LOWRY—Of the many who turned a deaf ear to every tender emotion of his own bosom, that he might stand to his post and perform his daties faithfully, br. W. R. Lowry, of Memphis, ranks among the most prominent. Jas the fearful plague rolled onward, and the Reaper cut daily threads of life which bound men to earth, Dr. Lowry found it necessary to give up his wife and son that they might seek a safer clime. When the sad farewell came, each realized the heartrending meaning that they were parting, perhaps to meet no more until they clasped hands on the other side of Jordan where partings are not known. Thus he stood, cut off from those he held most dear, that he might give his valuable assistance in striving to arrest the fearful disease. Ere a few months had elapsed, he too was called to "join the innumerable caravan which moves to that mysterious realm." Our friend had been a resident of Memphis for many years. A gentleman of rare culture and refinement, and beloved by all who knew him. Oh, widowed wife, and orphared boy, we tender to you our heartfelt sympathies.

memory! could we but obliterate it. The history of the terrible scourge of 1878 may be written—strangers will con the facts, and shudder with horror at its ravages; but it is left to those who have lost their loved ones to feel the b'ling sting o' sorrow. The destroying angel has stricken the infant, the youth and the aged, and carried away the light of our friend's life. May the tireat I Am "temper the wind to the shorn lamb," and guide him in the way which leads to everlasting peace and reunion with the dear ones gone before.
